Did You Know?

Electric cooperatives have retired $13.8 billion to members since 1988 — $1 billion in 2015 alone. Because electric co-ops operate at cost, any excess revenues, called margins, are allocated and retired to members in the form of capital credits.

Director obtains certification

Director Robin Williams recently completed the required NRECA courses to obtain her Credentialed Cooperative Director (CCD) Certificate.

The CCD is earned by attending five required courses and successfully completing a learning assessment for each. The courses are designed to provide essential knowledge and skills required of cooperative directors.

NRECA offers three director certificate programs and the CCD must be completed prior to moving on to the next program, the Board Leadership Certificate (BLC).

Williams is eager to begin working towards the BLC and plans to begin classes this fall.

Charles Guerry, executive vice president, presented Director Robin Williams the CCD Certificate during the July meeting of the board of directors.

Beware of Third Party Payment Sites

There Are Better Ways to Pay Your Bills

These days there are numerous ways to pay for goods and services. HEMC has noticed recently that more members are using third party bill payment services to pay their electric bill. Some of these services even make it seem as if they are affiliated with HEMC when they are not. While some bill paying services are legitimate, members that use these should be cautious. Often these third party sites charge additional fees and do not always make the payment the same day as you pay them, which could result in your bill payment being late and your power being disconnected.

HEMC offers many different options to pay your electric bill and we do not recommend that you use a third party vendor. You may pay your bill in person, over the phone, through the mail, sign up for bank or credit card draft or pay online. To pay online visit halifaxemc.com and click on Member Info, then View/Pay Bill. Most importantly, HEMC does not charge an additional service fee to accept your payment and your payment is applied to your account immediately.
